

Economics and the election broader economic debate in this election. We need to focus on building the next economic miracle not spending the proceeds of the last one.

Economic debate in this election should focus on the parties' plans to improve:

- Prudence: We should run substantial surpluses on recurrent budget during good times. This 'loads the fiscal cannon' giving us room for equally big deficits to fight future downturns. Budget surpluses also help redirect

Professor Allan Fels, Australian and New Zealand School of Government

Professor John Freebairn, Melbourne University

Professor Glenn Withers, Public Policy Program, ANU.

Published as “Economists: Make our own luck” in The Australian, September 22, 2004 at